Bring it to Jesus.

Bring it to Jesus, He knows thy career, Has followed thy steps on the pathway of life; Langued to help thee, and assured a heart, Laid to deliver thee, as soon as I see thee.

Bring it to Jesus, He knows thy life, Thy soul to be saved, and thy heart to be filled; Bring Him thy want, He will make thee complete, Bring Him thy temptations, He'll bid thee be still.

Bring it to Jesus, He has all His terms, Thy life for life, thy hands for His own; Bring Him thy goodness given for His love, Wealth for His spending, and give us His spell.

Every War Crier will rejoice that the Commandant has been able this week to resume his Territorial Topics. Generally speaking this is the column to which we all instinctively first turn, and the lives record the victories and joys, their successes and blessings are a stimulus to us all. The Acts of the Apostles, whether the old or revised version, whether ancient or modern, is always an interesting topic, and especially for those who have a place in God's Kingdom. God speed the war.

Christmas-time brings many blessings. The homeless poor, the widow and the orphan have all participated in the charity of those who, at this festive season, have felt the necessity of doing something to aid the poor. And yet how true it is that with many poor, at any rate, the improvement as well as the means of their poverty and want are in their own hands. Therefore always exceptions, and the charity that is true, intelligent, and wisely directed will seek to lead the helpless and poor to mend their ways, to improve them, and to deal with each case according to its merits, wisely and well.

This leads me to the theme at the Workman's Shelter or "Lido." Miss MacDonald had invited us to her regular stand. The generosity of friends had been requisitioned to bring the needed, and the large meeting-room was transformed for the time being into a dining-room, well filled with certainly a merry crowd. To our great joy we found that the Commandant would be able to preside in person, and with him came our best needs of our submerged tenth. Things at my end of the table were certainly lively. Mr. John Macdonald sought to improve us with the fact that though not related to any distinguished person of that name in Canada he was still in important factor in a hearing, and if talking helps digestion then that would account for the fact that our good friend was able to talk and get so ample justice to the case, beef and plum pudding before him. As John has been an extensive traveler he took up the subject against the Social Service, and in a few minutes took us on a trip round the world. "Now," said MacDonald, "Have you visited there?" "Yes," "Humph! What about Gibraltar? Have you been there?" "Yes," replied the Brigadier. After mentioning several places, old John came to the conclusion that he had had certainly been a sailor or a soldier. "Now-of-war's" man or something of that kind, and as MacDonald was looking at him, he said, "You are a man-of-war's man, are you?" "Yes," said the Brigadier. "What about Gibraltar? After the dinner, the Commandant called for testimonials, and it was soon for those who, at this festive season, have felt the necessity of doing something to aid the poor. The General in Ireland

LATEST FROM THE FRONT

Pety eight hours after his arrival in London from a secret tour in the General's way to Ireland. Thirteen years ago, Mr. Major Reynolds, accompanied by two officers, appeared in the city of London, and no little rough work had to be done to get him to his room. The early morning of the day, the General was in the city, and the early morning of the day, the General was in the city.

Have had another tour to London. Sergeant-Major Wilson drove me out to the real Salvation Army happy home. Shocked with one brother, who stated he got right with God the night after the last visit. Captain McNeill is really here. His health is very shaky. A good revival is what is needed in London. God speed it.
